THE ATLANTIC LINERS

Signs, Signals and Flags Used by the Various Companies.

COLORS OF THE BIG FUNNELS

In Some Cases They Are Very Much Alike, but the Night Lights Used by the Vessels of the Different Lines Are Quite Distinctive.

It is said that but comparatively few of the many thousands of persons that each year patronize the various lines of steamships crossing the Atlantic are familiar with the various distinguishing signs and signals employed by the vessels of the respective companies. Yet it is a very easy thing to tell at a glance to what line any given ship belongs—the American line, for instance.

About all that one must remember in the case of the vessels of our own line is that the funnels are black, each with its white band. When you see an Atlantic liner at night with a blue light forward, red light amidships and a blue light aft you know at once that she is of the American line.

All Cunarders show a red funnel with black rings and a black top, while the night signals consist of a blue light and two roman candles, each throwing out six blue balls.

There are but two of the leading transatlantic lines the ships of which carry cream colored funnels—the North German Lloyd and the Holland-America lines. The first employs a perfectly plain funnel without any other color than cream, and the latter shows a cream funnel with a white band and green borders. Signals displayed at night by these lines are, in the case of the North German Lloyd, two blue red lights, one forward and one aft, and, in the case of the Holland-America line, a green light forward and aft with a white light under the bridge.

Two lines use buff tunnels, the White Star and the Hamburg-American, the difference between the two being that, while the former shows a black top, the latter is plain buff throughout. White Star night signals are two green lights flashed simultaneously.

Quite a number of lines carry black funnels—the American with a white band, as mentioned above; the Anchor which is entirely black; the Bristol, with a variegated and fancy touch, the black smokestack being relieved by a white band in the center and a blue star in the middle of the white band. In the regular service of the Hamburg American line, as distinguished from the express service, we find that the color is plain black, while the Red Star is black with a white band and a black top.

The Scandinavian-American and the Wilson lines have red and black funnels, black in the first case with a red top and red funnel with a black top in the second.

The red funnel of the French line has a black top similar to the funnels of other lines, but with different proportions of color. On this line the

Motor Boat With Ferro Engine Saved Dr. Cook

Comes to Rescue Twice at Critical Point—30-Foot Launch Tows Schooner "Bradley."

Experiences from Dr. Cook returning from his polar expedition disclose the remarkable performance of a motor boat in his trip to the far north. This boat not only saved the lives of Dr. Cook and the members of the expedition but also towed the boats of an entire Esquimo village to safety and pulled the yacht "Bradley" out of danger when her engines were disabled.

The motor boat "Farthest North" was taken with the "Bradley" for scouting expeditions and hunting and fishing trips. It was the first motor boat ever taken into the far north, and was used in the ice fields and in shallow water where the yacht could not go.

The first rescue work was performed near Oomanooi. The engines of the "Bradley" became disabled in very bad weather. The 30-foot motor boat with a 17 H. P. Ferro motor succeeded in towing her to a safe anchorage. The "Bradley" is a 100-foot schooner of 112 gross tons and this was a very able demonstration of marine engine efficiency. While the repairs were made the motor boat was the only means of communication with the shore and was kept busy taking Dr. Cook and other members of the party back and forth.

When Etah, the then most northern point, was reached, Dr. Cook and a small party in the "Farthest North" went on a scouting expedition in search of suitable winter quarters. Annotook, a town 25 miles farther north, was decided upon by reason of the abundance of furs and food there. Upon returning to Etah, the entire population of that village in the "Bradley" started for Annotook.

A strong wind had raised mountainous seas and on account of the unknown rocks, shallow water and drifting ice, a safe anchorage could not be found for the yacht. The arctic storm threatened to engulf the entire expedition. The motor boat was pressed into service, and with the greatest speed carried to shore the members of Dr. Cook's party, and a large amount of supplies and camp equipment. The boats belonging to the Esquimos were towed to shore as the sea was too rough for them to attempt it alone. Dr. Cook says: "The splendid efficiency of the launch proved equal to the emergency, and in the course of about three hours all were safely put to shore in spite of threatening winds and forbidding seas."

color is plain black, while the Red Star is black with a white band and a black top.

The Scandinavian-American and the Wilson lines have red and black funnels, black in the first case with a red top and red funnel with a black top in the second.

The red funnel of the French line has a black top similar to the funnels of other lines, but with different proportions of color. On this line the night signals are a blue light forward a white light amidships and a red light aft, forming the French tricolor.

At night the Anchor line of vessels shows a white light, then a red. The Bristol displays a green light only. The Hamburg-American ships for both services, regular and express, show two red-white-blue lights in quick succession at the stern. The Red Star displays three red lights, one forward one aft and one amidships, all flashed together. The Scandinavian line employs one white-red, followed by one red-white light, and the Wilson puts out two red lights about sixty feet apart.

It will be observed from the foregoing that the night signals of all the different lines vary, while the funnels in some cases are very similar. This however, does not lead to confusion for in determining the line to which a vessel belongs one must also take into consideration the flag or pennant she flies. Every line, of course, carries a different "house flag," as it is called.

The flag of the Cunard line is red with a golden lion in the center, while that of the White Star vessels is of the same color, but swallowtail in shape and containing a white star. The house flag of the Red Star line is exactly the same as that of the White Star company with the colors reversed—flag white, star red.

The flag of the Hamburg-American line is an elaborate affair—white and blue diagonally quartered with a black anchor and a yellow shield in the center. The North German Lloyd flag is a handsome one, showing a design of a key and an anchor crossed in the center of a laurel wreath in blue on a white field.

The Atlantic Transport line flies a pretty flag of red, white and blue horizontal bars, with stars.—Edwin Torrisse in Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

George Calvin Currie, police magistrate, Picton, for the past twenty-five years, died on Sunday night. When he was dressing on Saturday he was seized with a stroke, from whose effects he never recovered. MEN ARE SAVED BY FAITH

True Faith Cares Little for Formulas; It Is Concerned With Fruits

"We are saved by hope."—Rom. viii., 24.

Faith is forward and not backward looking. You may know any man's faith not by what he believes as to the past but by what he hopes, determines, and has confidence in for the future. Faith is that which pierces into the unknown and brings to us its promise, gives assurance of that which we do not yet see but which we long for. It looks back only that the trend of the past may indicate the way of the future.

Cherishing memorials of long ago will not equip a man for journeying in to-day. We cannot live by the bread our fathers won; we must seek our own. We cannot move toward their ideals, for many of them have become our commonplace realities. Faith is forward moving in the confidence that the way gets better further on.

The dead creeds are those that are packed away in the memories of men. The living creeds are those that are translating themselves into everyday living. In a right world no one needs to fear for a moment that his destiny will depend on his acceptance of any form of statement of truth; destiny is for each of us the working out into our lives of

THE LIVING TRUTH WE KNOW.

Men are saved by faith, but it is not by faith in forms of words nor faith in forms of acts; it is faith in the truth they see, such faith that forces them to put that truth in their own lives and to bring its will to be done and its vision to become the fact of all lives. Saving faith is the faith that saves a man from dead forms into living realities, into higher endeavors, into newness of living.

If religion is only a certain fixed set of ideas then one can be religious without being anything else in particular. It is then possible to think of a religious man who is without any special evidence of his faith in his conduct. If, on the other hand, religion is an attitude of the life, it is bound to have results in character and conduct.

Most people are more concerned about the philosophical roots of their religion than about its practical fruits. They are more anxious that their ideas of the divine should be accurate, or that others should consider them, than they are that their deeds should reflect and reveal that divine and higher glory of character.

When once one has caught some vision and hope of the fullness of life that religion reveals, when he has seen some glimpse of the ideal kingdom to which its aspirations point, he is then concerned only in making that ideal a reality.

Religiously more people die of surfeit than of starvation, more of too many sermons and too little service. They become habitual hearers of the word; they exhaust their powers in seeking after impressions and sensation; they have none left for expression.

SAVE IN PHRASES.

Faith to them is feeding the emotions; but saving faith always compels to service.

No man possesses any more religion than he practises; his religion is that aspiration and ideal that has sufficient motive and power to compel action, the rest is barren and often baneful speculation, theorizing, dreaming. No man becomes a saint by dreaming of heaven. He is a saint who, because he believes in the possibility of the heavenly, seeks its present realization.

The faith we need is that which saves us from taking this world in terms of despair, the faith that sees the universe as essentially the expression of the eternal goodness, that believes that there is law, order, and love here, that because he believes this works to bring about the will of the all-embracing love.

Faith is hope, aspiration seeking realization. Because it sees the vision of a new heaven and a new earth it labors to bring them here. Looking forward, it lifts up. It sees the possible good in even the most unpromising; it sees the promise of spring in the storms of winter; it sees the handiwork of love in the ways of pain; it finds the promise of the full life everywhere.

LESTER'S LOST

ILLUSION

Little Mrs. Kemp treated Lester Bentley with effusiveness.

In that mood she always meant mischief, so the young man was on his guard. Little Mrs. Kemp (in the days when he was little Miss Lancey) had been good-natured, plump and pretty; then Marcus Kemp had come along. He was a wealthy man—she was a poor parson's daughter, and report spoke, not without reason, when it said that the marriage had turned her head. She remained, it is true, plump and pretty still, but her good nature became so tinged with worldliness as to be well-nigh unrecognizable. The aim and object of her frivolous life was that her younger sister, Adena, of whom, despite the difference in their dispositions, she was, in her way, inordinately fond, should make as "good" a match as she herself had made.

Now, Lester Bentley—a young subaltern in a cavalry regiment, and the son of the squire in the Lanceys' village—had worshipped Adena from time immemorial. But Adena's sister had lately decided that Adena must look higher. And this being so she set her wits to work.

Bentley's regiment chanced to be stationed near the domicile of Kemp, and for old acquaintance sake he was in the habit of calling occasionally. On this special day he had been bidden by Mrs. Kemp to lunch, and asked to come early, and this unusual geniality, coupled with the warmth of the welcome when he arrived, puzzled him not a little. He had rejoiced with a surprised joy at the invitation, for he knew that Adena was staying with her sister, though so far Adena had not appeared. Mr. Kemp was away, and Lester experienced a cold sense of disappointment when he found himself settled into a comfortable solitude a deux with his hostess.

Truth to tell, he had made up his mind to do to-day what he had heroically set his face against doing in the days when promotion seemed far off—namely, to ask Adena Lancey to be his wife.

He was a tall, well-knit young man, with a pair of rather wistful blue eyes. Dogs and children adored him. Little Mrs. Kemp's small and much dressed son, Petro, worshipped the ground he trod on.

As it happened, a great measure of Mrs. Kemp's effusiveness was owing to the fact that she had some disagreeable business to get over, and she felt a trifle nervous.

Conversation jogged on, becoming a little spasmodic.

Mrs. Kemp praised the regiment, congratulated Lester on his chance of advancement, and then a pause occurred.

"I declare, Lester," she began with a little affected giggle which sorely tried her listener's nerves. "I am forgetting our great piece of news—and to such an old friend as you—it is too bad of me!"

"News?" said Lester, but the light died out of his eyes. It was evil news—he knew it by her tone. "Yes, Adena has made up her mind at last."

"Made up her mind?" Lester felt suddenly very dull, and as if he must echo sentences instead of

"Nothing you'd understand, Peter—just an illusion."

"What's a 'illusion'?"

Lester swung the small hand that clung to his brown one miserably to and fro.

"An illusion is—oh! it's something very bright and shining—and lovely—when you've got it. Illusions are made to be lost, so we must make the best of it."

"But they can be found again," said the child eagerly. "Nana says I'm a dab at finding things. I found Mummie's purse one day, and cook's spectacles—case—p'raps I can find your 'illusion'."

"I am afraid not, Petro."

The sight of the fountain at this point broke the thread of the discourse. Lester admired it as in duty bound, and lifted Petro up to dabble his fingers in the wide basin. In the midst of their inspection the lunch gong resounded from the house.

A sharp spasm of pain contracted Lester's face. The realization of exactly what that lunch would mean to him oppressed him almost to distraction. Had he not been a soldier, he would have turned and fled. As it was, he squared his shoulders and clenched his hands, and set his face towards the house. "Don't look sorry, Lester, I'll find your 'illusion'—honor bright I will," said Petro's voice at his side.

Lester caught the child up and kissed him, and left a tear—one of the very few he had ever shed—on the chubby cheek.

Then he walked quickly towards his fate.

* * * * *
Lester Bentley had lived for twenty-eight years in the world, and had partaken of many lunches. Some had amused him—some had frankly bored him. It was left to this special lunch to provide him with a set of entirely new sensations.

Adena had received his congratulations with composure. She sat opposite to him at the table. She was gayer than usual—feverishly gay even. She talked at random without waiting for answers to any of the questions she asked. She was not at ease, Lester decided. This was not surprising; most girls, under the circumstances, would have felt the situation to be something of a strain. But was she really happy? He could endure a great deal if he felt certain of that—but he did not feel certain of it.

He had not known her since the days of white socks and labored pronunciation for nothing.

Sir Willoughby Carr was obviously very proud of her, but he was a quiet man—a man whose face it was difficult to read.

There was an oppression in the air that was almost physical; once or twice Lester could have cried out aloud. Convention forbidding this, he made a pretext of eating—an entirely shallow one which deceived nobody. After the meal was over Sir Willoughby discovered that he wanted to stroll to the village post-office to send off an important telegram. Adena offered dutifully to accompany him. They set out, and little Mrs. Kemp suggested that Lester would enjoy his smoke on the terrace.

Up and down he paced, thinking hard.

He would make his adieux before Adena returned he decided. To wish her good-bye now would have a horrible kind of finality about it. Adena had gone out of his life. Suddenly his reverie was cut sharply in twain by a shout.

Verse 18. James—It seems to be established beyond doubt that this is one of the brothers of our Lord. He was the acknowledged head of the church at Jerusalem.

All the elders were present—These men constituted the government of the church, together with James.

19. He rehearsed one by one—Luke was present, but omits the details of Paul's narrative, as the ground has already been covered so fully.

20. Thou seest . . . how many thousands there are among the Jews of them that have believed—It was the feast of Pentecost, about twenty-seven years after the miraculous gift of the Holy Spirit. The greatest problem which had arisen during that time must have been the one here mentioned, that the Jewish Christians were all zealous for the law. To them Christianity was only an improved Judaism, and they clung tenaciously to all the Mosaic ceremonials in which they had been trained. The destruction of Jerusalem was necessary in order to make the complete break between the old and new.

21. They have been informed concerning thee—The verb indicates that at Jerusalem a systematic teaching had been going on in opposition to Paul, and as a result great hostility had been aroused against him.

Thou teachest . . . to forsake Moses—Knowing as we do, from the acts and words of Paul, how perverted was this accusation, we can understand the ferocity of his denunciations of these malicious Judaizers.

23-26. The Jerusalem elders, while recognizing and confirming the liberty of the Gentiles, as guaranteed to them by the great council, urge upon Paul a course which may disarm his accusers of their prejudices. In short, he is to ally himself with some humble Nazirites (see Num. 6. 1-21) and complete with them the final purification ceremonies of a vow which they had assumed. As an evidence of good faith, he is to pay for all the sacrifices, and remain in the temple until the full ordinance is observed. In this way the disaffected will see he does not neglect the law, and he himself will contradict one of his own teachings or practice, as he goes already declared himself willing to become all things to all men, for the sake of the gospel, to the Jews becoming as a Jew, that he might make them.

27. Seven days. The appointed time for the fulfillment of the vow in the erection of the temple.

28. Against the people, and the law, and the place—A threefold charge, namely hostility to the Jews themselves, contempt for their law, and desecration of the temple. This last charge was supported by a declaration that he brought Greeks also into the temple. This reference to Trophimus (verse 23), one of Paul's companions, a Gentile from Ephesus, was, of course, unfounded. The "Court of Israel" was distinct from the outer court, known as the "Court of the Gentiles," and separated from it by a high wall, with inscriptions threatening death to all Gentile intruders. Though Paul was not actually a subscriber of the Mosaic law, he had perceived that a man was saved by faith in Christ and not by works of the law. In the end this would lead to a disregard of the law even among the Jews.

29. Dragged him out of the temple; and the doors were shut—This precaution was, doubtless, in 23, 21, it describes the din of multitude.

35. The stairs—Leading from the temple area to the castle, and uncovered, as is shown by the fact that Paul was able to address the crowd.

36. Away with him—The same cry raised by the Jews against Jesus.

37, 38. Dost thou know Greek? Art thou not then the Egyptian?—Evidently the captain knew that this Egyptian, who for some reason was suspected Paul of being, was unable to speak Greek. The banal leader of the Assassins (or Sicarii), according to Josephus, inspired his men to murder influential Jews who were friendly to Rome. Thirty thousand of these men tried to break into Jerusalem by force from the Mount of Olives, but were dispersed, and the Egyptian escaped.

39. I am a Jew, of Tarsus . . . a citizen of no mean city—Tarsus was a city of rare culture, devoted to philosophic studies, and as citizen there was confined to a select few, its possession was a mark of rank.

40. Beckoned with the hand unto the people.—The captain must have released one of the chains for the time being. This, with the gesture made by Paul, would really gain the great silence among Orientals.

Chapter 22, verse 1. The defense—Paul made four points in his own behalf: (1) that he was a Jew by birth and training, and had been zealous for the law to the point of persecuting the Christians; (2) that his conversion came through a divine intervention, and was confirmed by a later revelation to Ananias; (3) that after his conversion he continued to worship in the temple, and received a vision there; (4) that because of the unbelief of the Jews, God had sent him to the Gentiles.

Fathers—Members of the Sanhedrin and rabbis.

3. Gamaliel—The greatest scholar of his age among the Jews, and still referred to by them as a man of exceptional ability. He was called "the beauty of the law."

5. The estate of the elders—The Sanhedrin.

8. Jesus of Nazareth—The other accounts of Paul's conversion (Acts 9 and 26) do not refer to Jesus in this way.

11. Could not see for the glory of that light—This is the only place where this explanation of his blindness is given.

14. The God of our fathers—Notice that in the mind of Ananias there was no thought of rapture with the Jews.

15. All men—A stupid avoidance of the hated word "Gentiles."

17. When I had returned to Jerusalem—the visit referred to in Acts 9, 26. Paul had been meantime in Arabia.

While I prayed in the temple—Such a man would not be likely to disesteem Jewish observances.

Fell into a trance—Paul had many of these experiences.

18. Get thee quickly out of Jerusalem—His stay lasted only fifteen days.

21, 22. Unto the Gentiles. And they gave him audience unto this word—They restrained themselves until Paul reached the point where he could no longer keep back the hated word, then their violent passions broke forth.

25. Tied him up with the thongs—Stretching the prisoner forward by means of straps, so that he will be in position for the scourging.

28. I am a Roman born—Roman citizenship was acquirable in four sorely tried her listener's nerves. "I am forgetting our great piece of news—and to such an old friend as you—it is too bad of me!"

"News?" said Lester, but the light died out of his eyes. It was evil news—he knew it by her tone. "Yes, Adena has made up her mind at last."

"Made up her mind?" Lester felt suddenly very dull, and as if he must echo sentences instead of initiating them.

"She was always a difficult girl to please," she went on with a flurried little laugh, "but I think and trust that Sir Willoughby Carr will make her an ideal husband."

"Sir Willoughby Carr?" Lester repeated the name as if the effort cost him physical pain. Sir Willoughby Carr was a brand new baronet—so created because of the million sterling with which a shrewd business capacity had endowed him. He was a kind, humble, middle-aged man, with apparently no soul above his factorries. The thought of Adena, his gracious, beautiful Adena, with her cultivated mind and sensitive feelings tied to common-sense and factories went through him like a knife. And he had hoped and fancied that she cared for him!

"I hope she'll be happy," he said.

"Oh! I think so," Mrs. Kemp broke in hurriedly. "I think there's no doubt about that. He's very quiet, and she's so gay and clever. It's the attraction of opposites. She'll make an excellent châtelaine for that delightful place of his. It was only settled yesterday. He lunches with us to-day. Adena has driven over to meet him. I did not tell her you were coming. I wanted to surprise her!"

"Well, you've surprised me," he said with a gallant attempt at a smile, "and—" But at that moment Petro ran in, and engulfed his friend in a series of ecstatic embraces.

"Mammie, may Lester come out and see the new fountain?" he begged. "It wants ever so long to lunch—do let him!"

And the young man, glad of the respite, was dragged away.

* * * * *

"Lester," cried Petro ten minutes later, pulling at his friend's hand, "you're not attending to me."

"Aren't I, old chap?" The young officer looked apologetic. "I'm afraid I'm a bit off song to day."

"What's off song?"

"Angry, irritable, miserable—everyting horrid."

A sudden idea struck Petro.

"Have you lost anything?" he asked solemnly.

"Lost anything, why?"

"Cause Nana's angry and irritable when she loses things. She lost a silver bimble this morning, and she walked with her head down just like you. Have you lost anything, Lester?"

"Yes," Lester looked down at him with a miserable little smile. "That's it, old chap. I've lost something."

"Oh! what?"

ways: (1) by birth, if both parents were Romans; (2) by grants to certain districts; (3) by grant for great service to the state; (4) by purchase. Under Claudius (A. D. 41-54) it was cheap. It is assumed that the apostle's parents were citizens.

29. Was afraid . . . because he had bound him—He did not now loose him from the chains, simply from the scourging thongs.

gested that Lester would enjoy his smoke on the terrace.

Up and down he paced, thinking hard.

He would make his adieux before Adena returned he decided. To wish her good-bye now would have a horrible kind of finality about it. Adena had gone out of his life. Suddenly his reverie was cut sharply in twain by a shout.

"Lester—Lester!" screamed the shrill voice of Petro from afar. "Oh, Lester, I've found it!"

Lester turned sharply. "Found what, old chap?" he asked, raising an absent smile.

His conversation with the châtelaine earlier in the day had completely slipped his memory.

"Why your 'illusion, o' course." Petro sounded rather offended. "I found it a minute ago by the fountain, an' I ran to Nana for paper to wrap it in, 'cause I fought you'd gone, and I'd have to send it to the barracks. But Nana was cross, so I went to auntie 'Dena's dressing-room and took some paper from her dressing-table drawer, and then I saw you from the window on the terrace, and I runned."

Lester looked so entirely mystified at Petro, with his hand still tightly clasped, became plaintive.

"You did lose a 'illusion didn't you?" he asked; "somefink bright and shining."

"Why, yes?" said Lester, beginning to understand.

Slowly and with a dawning smile Petro unclosed a chubby fist; inside the fist was a folded letter.

"It's inside dere!" he explained with triumph—"open it!"

Lester dropped into a seat, and dazedly did as he was bidden, whilst the child danced excitedly at his side. He unfolded the letter carefully, and then he gave a short, sharp exclamation. Inside it was a ring—a half hoop of big, magnificent diamonds, which caught the sun's rays and glowed like fire.

"Isn't it a beautiful 'illusion' cried the delighted Petro.

He held the ring in one hand and looked helplessly at the letter as if for explanation. All at once, as if directed by a force outside himself, his eyes caught the following sentence: "You can have no pride. Adena, if you still go on hoping against hope that Lester Bently will one day ask you to be his wife. It is common talk in Conminster that the announcement of his engagement to his colonel's daughter (Miss Bolitho) is only a matter of weeks. You have worn your heart on your sleeve so long that it is quite time you disguised your feelings. Pity is the last thing you desire, but pity you will get unless you take a drastic step, and that soon."

thing better—I believe I've got a certainty; but don't you bother your head about that. You've given me all I want in this world, anyhow, I fancy; now go away, there's a good boy!"

The child ran off, and Lester got up just as a pink chiffon parasol and a rustling, silk gown swooped down upon him.

"Oh! Lester," Mrs. Kemp began; but something in the young man's face stopped her. Lester held the letter towards her.

"This came into my hand without my seeking, Mrs. Kemp," he said gravely, "and I had no right to do so—but I read it. It wants more explanation than I fancy you are prepared to give. That explanation I intend to make—to Adena."

Little Mrs. Kemp flushed to the roots of her carefully crimped hair.

"If Adena was fool enough to show you this," she said, "I have nothing more to say. I should have thought pride—"

"Adena did not show it me," he interrupted sternly.

"Then it wasn't a very honorable—" she began.

"Perhaps you and I had better not discuss honor," he interrupted.

And little Mrs. Kemp, with an angry sob, gathered up her skirts and left him. When she had gone Lester stood for a moment undecided. The ring he had almost forgotten—it was still clasped in his left hand. He had recognized it at once. It was Adena's engagement ring. She must have dropped it as she passed the fountain on the way out.

He must see Adena at once—that was clear.

He left the terrace and strode quickly in the direction of the lodge gates.

As he came near the fountain he saw Adena on her knees searching busily on the velvet grass which surrounded it.

She looked up as his footsteps came nearer.

"Oh, Lester," she said with a small, nervous laugh, "such an ill-omened thing has happened. When I got to the post-office I discovered that I'd lost my ring—the ring Sir Willoughby gave me, you know. He's outside searching the road—I ran back here."

"I was coming to look for you," Lester said quietly. "Little Petro brought it to me—wrapped up in a letter which he took from a drawer in your room. Here's the letter, too, Adena. I read it—I'd no right to. It's the first really cadish thing I've ever done; but I saw my own name—and somehow I had to go on."

He handed her both. She had risen, and was looking at him with wild, frightened eyes.

"How dare Petro take letters from my room?" she said faintly, as, glancing at it, she realized its importance.

"A mere childish impulse—he wanted something to wrap his find in. I think myself that Providence guided him in his search."

"What do you mean?" she said dully.

"I mean," he said, with his eyes on her face, "that I am now able to clear up a mystery. There is no colonel's daughter in the question—so far as I am concerned. When Mrs. Kemp of set purpose penned these words, she knew they were idle gossip. I was with the man Miss Bolitho was to have married in South Africa when he fell. She looks upon me as a link with the past—that is all. You were the w-

MAKING GOOD SALADS.

There are two ways in which many cooks are prone to spoil a salad. One of these is the salad is not cold enough; the other, there is too much vinegar in the French dressing. Either of these faults is so easy to remedy that one wonders why it never occurs to the offending 'dames of the kitchen' to do differently.

A salad ought to be thoroughly chilled, served on chilled plates, and served with a chilled dressing. It is not at all a difficult matter to manage, if you will resolutely save half of one of the shelves of the ice-box for your salad and its plates, and firmly resist all the encroachments of the milk bottles and butter crocks and left over dishes.

As for the French dressing, vinegars vary so widely in strength and acidity that it is impossible to give any hard and fast rule. Try one tablespoonful of vinegar to four of oil, and after they are thoroughly blended taste critically. You can then tone it up or down as you like it best. To vary a French dressing, try adding half a teaspoonful of onion juice when you make a romaine salad, or half a green pepper chopped fine for asparagus.

String Bean Salad—Chill a can of the small string beans, open, drain and rinse with ice water. Serve on crisped lettuce leaves with French dressing. Cold boiled beans can be used, but the canned beans are better and so much easier to get if you haven't a garden of your own.

Knickerbocker Salad—Crisp the small inner leaves of romaine and arrange a bed of them on each individual service plate. Carefully remove the membrane from orange sections and place six sections on each bed of romaine. Garnish with strips of Spanish red pepper laid cross wise the orange. You can cut the peppers narrow with the kitchen scissors. Serve with French dressing which has a good dash of sherry and plenty of paprika. This makes a charming company salad as the color effect is pretty.

Asparagus Salad—Have a big red pepper, whole and cut right across it in parallel cuts, leaving the skin in circles about one quarter of an inch wide. In each of these circles, carefully insert half a dozen stalks of the finest and largest canned asparagus. Serve on lettuce leaves and be sure that it is cold. The dressing may be either French or mayonnaise. If mayonnaise is used, fill a lettuce leaf with it and set it beside the asparagus, and garnish with tiny stars cut from the red pepper, with one of the little cutters which may be purchased for that purpose.

Tomatoes en Surprise—Select the best shaped and ripest tomatoes, scald, peel and chill. Cut off a circle from the stem end, remove the seed and interior pulp, and let the tomato drain. Fill with a mixture of the firmest parts of the tomato pulp, small chunks of cucumber, and celery with a tiny grating of onion. Mix with mayonnaise, place a spoonful of mayonnaise on top of each tomato and send at once to table. If desired, add a few drops of the tomato juice pudding and brown in oven. Serve warm or cold.

Snowball Pudding.—One quart sweet milk, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, a pinch of salt, one-half cupful sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook in double boiler until smooth and thick, then stir in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Stir until light and foamy, then mold in cups previously dipped in cold water. For the sauce use the yolks of the two eggs, one pint of milk, sugar and vanilla to taste; cook until it begins to thicken. Set in ice box to cool. To serve turn snowball out in individual dishes and surround with yellow sauce.

ORANGE RECIPES.

Orange Marmalade.—One dozen oranges, grated rind of four oranges, one pineapple, eight stalks of rhubarb, one grape fruit (pulp), and two lemons (pulp). Run all through the fruit chopper and boil for fifteen minutes. Then add the same quantity of sugar, and cook until it threads.

Orange Cake.—Cream one-third cupful butter, add one-half cupful sugar. Add one-half cupful sugar to the yolks of two eggs beaten light, and combine the two. Alternatively add one-half cupful milk, one and one-half cupfuls flour sifted three times, with two level teaspoonsfuls of baking powder, and the whites of two eggs last. Bake in three layer cake pans of small size. Put the layers together with orange filling. Spread a little of the filling on the top layer and into this press orange sections from which the skin has been taken.

Orange Filling.—Heat one cupful orange juice with half of the two-thirds cupful of sugar over hot water. Mix four level tablespoonfuls cornstarch with a little water and cook in the hot juice ten minutes. Add one egg beaten light with the other half of the sugar, and stir till the egg thickens the mixture. Add one tablespoonful butter and a little salt.

HOME DRESSMAKER.

Fancy Waists.—In making fancy waists in cotton materials first mark the design on the paper pattern, lay pattern on the goods doubled, cut and trace off the design, and also the seams and waistline. Take pattern off and baste on insertion, or if braided use the braider that comes with your sewing machine. The work is quickly and easily done with no guesswork about it.

Finishing Skirt.—A skirt could be finished in the same way a tailor finishes men's trousers. The skirt binding braid may be stitched at the bottom in the usual way, but when turning it up to baste put in a strip of mending tissue the width of the braid and press with a hot iron. Fasten the braid at each seam and you have a much neater finished skirt than by the old method.

Basting.—When you have lots of basting to do, thread several needles at one time and then when you use one thread leave needle in, and take up another until all are used. When you wish to remove basting, cut the knot and take the needle and draw it out, and your needle is threaded and ready for use again. It saves time both in threading needles and picking little threads off floor.

Particular Work—When you wish to make no mistakes in pinning goods and do not care to cut or use chalk use small safety pins. After once having a quantity of these little helpers in your sewing tray you unimportant, matter of course statement.

This announcement created no little excitement. Even the judge was betrayed into a look of undisguised astonishment, for although he had not presided at the previous trial, he had been deeply interested in it, and had believed Allison, as reported, to have been a victim in that fatal railroad disaster.

"Miss Brewster," said Mr. Lyttleton, after she had been sworn, "will you state when, where, and under what circumstances you last saw the prisoner, Mr. John Hubbard?"

He gave her an encouraging smile as he spoke, and Allison briefly related the substance of the conversation which had occurred between herself and her guardian on that day in Newport when he had tried to drive her into a marriage with him, when, upon her rejection of his suit, he had revealed to her the fact that she was not Mr. Brewster's child, that another heir claimed the property which had been willed to her, and then boasted of his intention to marry this claimant, and thus accomplish the purpose he had in view in seeking to marry her. She told how, frightened and almost in despair, she had fled from her home with the intention of seeking the protection of her cousin, Mr. Charles Manning, and appealing to him to help her in her trouble, and thus she had fallen a victim to the accident which had very nearly proved her death. She also explained how and by whom she had been rescued, and why she had remained in obscurity for so long.

Mr. Lyttleton knew just how to draw all this out most effectively, and when she concluded there was hardly a person in the room who did not believe that her former guardian was one of the greatest scoundrels alive.

As Gerald attended his betrothed to a seat, the lawyer simply observed:

"Your honor, we rest the case here."

We cannot follow step by step the rebutting evidence, but John Hubbard and his counsel desperately fought every inch of ground, and made a far better showing than any one would have believed possible by their tricks and quibbles and evasions.

Three whole days were occupied in questioning their witnesses in the cross examination of both sides and the legal squabbles over various points of law. The judge summed up the case clearly and logically, after which the jury retired and the occupants of the court-room schooled themselves to what patience they could to await the return of a verdict.

It was evident that neither John Hubbard nor his accomplice looked forward with much hope of an acquittal, for an air of unmistakable dejection had settled upon both. The former appeared twenty years older than when he entered the court-room three days previous. Allison's unexpected appearance had almost paralyzed him, while the amazing revelations regarding Gerald had aroused all the vindictiveness of his nature.

It was simply maddening to have the tables so cleverly turned upon him, to know that the magnificent fortune which he had coveted and schemed for, which, indeed, he already been within his grasp, would now drop, like a ripe plum, into the hands of his "beggar" rival, whom he had always hated from the depths of his evil heart.

The jury was absent only half an hour now, "my lucky young millionaire?" Mr. Lyttleton inquired of his successful client a few days after the close of the trial.

"Do?" repeated our hero, looking somewhat surprised at the question. "Why, I am going to keep on doing just what I have been doing."

Mr. Lyttleton laughed out heartily at this reply.

"Well, that is rich," he exclaimed. "I don't believe you half-realize your position if you are content to plod along in my service as a common clerk with a salary of twelve hundred dollars a year! Not but that what I should be very glad to keep you," he continued with a friendly glance at the fine, thoughtful face before him, "but I am afraid it would hardly be considered the proper thing for a young man of your present standing."

"But I am very certain that I am not going to live an idle life," Gerald spiritedly returned. "And I am sure I have enjoyed my work with you very much, Mr. Lyttleton."

"Thank you, my boy," said his friend earnestly. "It won't do, however, and you'll have plenty of employment for a while, at least, in looking after your estate and learning how to handle it."

"I am pretty sure that will not be a very difficult task, for whatever John Hubbard may have been, morally speaking, he was certainly a fine business man--shrewd and practical. Everything was systematically managed, and I am confident, since he expected to reap the fruits of my father's labor, he could not have swerved from his habitual methods."

And Gerald proved to be a true prophet in this respect, for the man, having planned a long holiday for himself, had arranged all business with a view to having as little trouble as possible in connection with matters pertaining to his income, and so, ever, thing was found to be in the best possible order.

"Well, I have a proposition to make to you," Mr. Lyttleton resumed. "Of course, you are at liberty to get your own pleasure, but, having had a wide experience in life, I am going to presume upon it and give you a little sound advice."

"It will be very acceptable, sir," said Gerald, smiling.

"You say you are not going to live an idle life," his friend observed. "That is a wise resolve, and I would propose that you give a year or two to earnest and thorough preparation for the bar. You have just the head for law, and with your stern adherence to principle, your high standard of right and justice, you would make a lawyer to honor the profession. I tell you, Gerald, the bar is sadly in need of men who will not violate their conscience and sell themselves for gold. We often hear it said that 'there is no justice in law, and it is, to some extent, true; though I blush to own it, the tricks, the falsehood, the bribery, and greed that are often employed in the practise are a disgrace to the Pink Pills.

The only way for every girl and woman to be well and at her best is to keep her blood rich and red and pure. Impure, weak blood is the cause of the wretched feeling of languor and faintness, pains in the back and sides, headaches and all those other indescribable sufferings which makes the lives of so many growing girls and women a daily torture. There is one sure way to be well, and that is through the tonic treatment supplied by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. These Pills actually make the new, rich blood which growing girls and women need to make them well and keep them well. Thousands of mothers and their daughters have found an effectual cure for anaemia, general weakness, indigestion, palpitation, nervous disorders, skin troubles and other ailments in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. J. C. Moses, Brenton, N. S., says: "Last spring and summer my daughter's health gave out. She had no energy, was very pale and nervous, and had no appetite. As the usual remedies given in such cases did not help her, we became much alarmed, and on the advice of a neighbor began giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. We could soon see an improvement, and as she continued to take the Pills she gained in weight and vigor; her color returned and her whole system seemed to be built up again. She is now the picture of health and joins in recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Ercildoune, Ont.

IMPRISONED FOR DEBT.

Committee for England Suggest Changes, Not Abolition.

That imprisonment for debt is necessary and should not be abolished is the opinion of the Select Committee which has been sitting for some time in London, Eng., to consider the question. Changes, however, in the present law are recommended.

Their report, which was laid on the table of the English House of Commons, has now been made public.

No other means of enforcing payment, the report points out, is equally effective.

How effective the threat of imprisonment is in making debtors pay up is shown from the fact that in 1907, the last year for which figures are available, 116,075 warrants for commitment were issued, but only 9,235 debtors were imprisoned, the remainder apparently paying their debts.

At present no warrant for imprisonment is issued unless the debtor has or has had since the date of the order or judgment means to pay, and has "neglected or refused" or "neglects and refuses" to pay; and the majority of the County Court judges, it is added, are in favor of the retention of the present law.

in the ration, the larger the milk flow. Protein in the ration is essential to the production of the milk.

The less energy required to digest the ration, the larger the milk flow.

The richer the ration, the richer the manure. The dairy farmer must look here for a large part of his profit.

No two cows can be fed alike. Each must be studied differently. Increase the protein in the ration and watch the milk flow.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Begin in October to get the hens in proper condition so that there will be plenty of eggs when they bring from 30 to 40 cents a dozen.

Swine must be given ample exercise and plenty of succulent food if they are to remain healthy and vigorous. A good clover pasture should be provided, followed by peas during midsummer. In the fall rape and clover furnish good pasture. Mature animals not sucking young need nothing in addition to this green food.

To chickens we believe in giving dry grains from the start--pinhead oatmeal, millet, finely cracked corn and wheat. Some fine grit and charcoal should be placed where they can get at it. Whole corn should not be given to chickens until they are quite large; its heating nature makes it likely to ferment in their gizzards, as cornmeal will do, if eaten freely. Wheat is an excellent feed for chickens after they are eight or ten weeks old.

Every horse knows that not one collar in 100 in daily use is a perfect fit; many will do, but a large majority of them are too wide for the neck and not adapted to the shoulders. Every horse should have his own collar to be able to do his work with comfort, and every collar should be fitted to the horse that is expected to wear it. If the collar is too long it should be cut off at the top; but if too wide and not adapted to the shoulders of the horse, don't think you must get a pad to fill in the space. Pads to the horse's shoulders in summer are about what overshoes would be to our feet--makes them tender and soft instead of firm and tough.

FARM NOTES

The percentage of fat in cream varies from eight to ten up to six or seven times as much. Good commercial cream should have twenty per cent. or more; anything above 35 is very rich.

It is all right to do all in our power to increase the price of butter and milk, but let us not spend so much time talking about it that we lower the grade of our products. The very best way to bring up the value of an article is to make it so good that everybody will want it.

The cost of plant food depends on two main points; the actual cost, as applied to the soil, and the unavoidable waste through improper mixing of materials. In the common markets, nitrogen costs in one of the best forms (nitrogen of soda) about fifteen cents per pound when delivered on the soil; potash, also, in the best form (German potash salts) costs about five cents per pound, and phosphoric acid, under like conditions (acid phosphate) about five cents per pound. By this is meant that these plant food elements, bought in the form of high-grade chemical fertilizers, would cost as stated. *

LIFE SAVERS.

Many times during the past year or so, have we gratefully considered the splendid work done in saving life and property by our various servants and inventions engaged in their duties. Some receive more praise than others, but one of the most popular of the many property saving devices shown this year at the Toronto Exhibition was that celebrated compound, the "Nugget" shoe polish which saves millions of shoes annually for people all over the civilized world who use it. Strictly speaking the "Nugget" Shoe Polish is a leather preservative which will double the life of your boots and needs only to be tried to convince the most skeptical.

Intense interest in its superior qualities was created at the Toronto Exhibition where shoes were polished with "Nugget" Polish and immediately afterwards washed. The water ran off the shoe "like water off a duck's back" and the shine was not destroyed, proving that it is a water-proof polish. The shoe was then wiped with a clean towel, but the polish did not rub off and soil it, which is conclusive evidence that it will not come off on the clothes in wet weather.

SUICIDE IN JAPAN.

Great Number of Suicides in Land of the Chrysanthemum.

The Japanese system of philosophy teaches that death is the easiest means of escaping from the troubles of life, and, from statistics published in a French economic journal, it is seen that suicide is something appalling, as far as numbers are concerned, in the "Land of the Chrysanthemum." From 1890 to 1897 7,000 cases were recorded; from 1898 to 1902 there were 8,000. In 1903 the number exceeded 9,000, and in 1904 it was 10,000. Sixty per cent. of the victims were men, and 40 per cent. women. A comparison is made with other countries. From 1887 to 1901 Denmark showed 253 per million of people, France 218, Switzerland 216, Prussia 197, Japan 184, Austria 159, Belgium 122, Sweden 119, Bavaria 118, England 80, Norway 80, Holland 58, Scotland 50, Italy 52, and Ireland 24. In the majority of cases in Japan the age of the victim is 50 and over. The principal causes are mental breakdown, difficulties of life, and chronic ill-health.

May and September show the highest number of these deaths. *

examples of these trees is the "Sack tree" (Antiaris innoxia) of Ceylon. To obtain the bark of this the tree is felled and cut into sections; these are submerged in still water for several weeks for the purpose of rotting the bark, the latter being then washed and pounded so as to separate the parenchymatous tissue from the closely interwoven layer of fibres. The bark is afterwards dried and bleached, when it is ready for use in a fashion according to the fancy of the wearer. The sections of the bark may be cut into any length so as to adopt it for either a ready-made skirt, kilt, or short. *

"I don't know what I should do without Mrs. Billtops," said Mr. B. "I'd be helpless without her. That is, about things that are unusual.

"This year we are going in different directions. I've got her trip planned for her to the last detail, and I've got my own transportation arranged for with entire completeness; but there, for my own trip, my preparations stop. She packs my trunk, she knows what I want and what I ought to have and then she tells me:

"'Ezra, your coat is in this place and your shoes here,' and thus on through the entire trunk contents; to which I listen with due attention, though I fear I don't remember any of it, because I don't have to; she's looked out for everything, and I know I'll find everything in the trunk when I want it; but this is a strange, a new place, that I'm going to this year, and not knowing anything about it I haven't made any advance arrangements for a stopping place there, and now this strikes me all of a sudden and I say to Mrs. B.:

"'Goodness gracious, Elizabeth, I don't know where I'm going to stay!' Whereupon Mrs. Billtops looks up with mild astonishment.

"'You don't know where you are going to stay, Ezra!' she says. 'Why of course you don't. You find out about that when you get there.'

"How true! Why, of course! I find out about that when I get there.

"I don't know what I should do without Mrs. Billtops."

COAL MINE EXPLOSION.

Experience of Miners When Half-a-Mile Underground.

The first signs are a rush of air, like some solid, living thing bent on devastation, and a reverberating roar, that makes the floor of the tunnel throb in sympathy. The miners lie stunned in the darkness—their lights have not survived the wind—while the rumble succeeds to a roar, the roar to a crash. Fragments fall perilously about them. There is a feeling as of hot flames bound round their brows. Overhead, between them and the sky, is half a mile of solid mineral and earth.

The miners are imprisoned. Solid blocks hem them in. For three days, perhaps, their lamps survive, and their only occupation is to eat what little provender they may have with them and wind their watches. When the light goes they lose count of time.

Years pass—or so it seems. Years of waiting and listening. Suddenly, a wild shout bursts from an entombed man's dry, parched throat. From somewhere he has heard a tapping. It gets louder. Shouts are responded to by shouts. The prisoners go mad with joy—a joy that nearly kills. The rescue party has arrived at last!

DEATH IN A SCRATCH.

Simple Injuries with Serious Results.

Morris Quatzam, an eleven years old Windsor boy, has just died as the result of a scratch on his wrist. Poison entered the wound, which was caused by falling off his bicycle, and despite the physicians, the boy died. Such incidents as these—by no means infrequent—ought to make people realize the danger that may lie even in the smallest flesh wound.

Take a simple illustration. When a dirty knife, a rusty needle, a splinter of dirty wood, a barbed wire fence, or a thorn, scratches the hand, the latter is inoculated with germs, of which the air about us is full. Directly these germs are introduced through the breach in the skin, a battle royal ensues between them and certain organisms in our blood.

When the invading germs are too strong for Nature's defences, in a few hours the finger will become hot and throbbing. A little later the wound may exhibit a whitish appearance in the middle of the swelling, and we have what is known as a festering or poisoned wound.

The way to avoid such serious results is to cleanse the wound and apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is a powerful yet painless germ killer, and when applied to the broken skin is absorbed into the tissue, instantly destroying the germs that spread disease and inflammation.

The flesh is thus soothed and purified, the wound made perfectly healthy, and all poison and cause of festering removed. Having done this, Zam-Buk then proceeds to heal the wound or sore with new healthy tissue, in a quick, painless, and perfect manner.

Zam-Buk must not be confused with

WHAT BURGLAR IS UP AGAINST.

A new burglar alarm has been invented in Germany which consists of a curtain or portiere, wired with fine conductors, connected at certain places on the curtain with small metal knobs. The curtain is drawn across the window or door, or around the safe, and the slightest disturbance of its position immediately breaks the circuit, as the metal knobs are thrown out of contact with each other. Should the burglar notice the wires and cut one of them, the breaking of the circuit would also start the alarm. The alarm itself may consist of a series of bells, lights, or other electrical appliances. This invention can be used to protect doors, windows, safes, etc.

"Women must consider it a dreadful fate to be old maids," said Mr. Chugwater. "They do, Josiah," said Mrs. Chugwater. "Look what terrible noodies they sometimes marry to escape it." And Josiah rubbed his chin, but said nothing.

Pills That Have Benefitted Thousands.—Known far and near as a sure remedy in the treatment of indigestion and all derangements of the stomach, liver and kidneys, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills have brought relief to thousands when other specifics have failed. Innumerable testimonials can be produced to establish the truth of this assertion. Once tried they will be found superior to all other pills in the treatment of the ailments for which they are prescribed.

WENT ONE BETTER.

"Did you hear how Mrs. Winnow got the better of Mrs. Getthere on her new hat?"

"No. How?"

"When she learned that Mrs. Getthere's hat was as big as hers she took the trimmings off the hat, put it on the box the hat came in, and wore the box."

CLOTHING FROM TREES.

How Primitive Man Found Some Ready-made Apparel.

Considering the great antiquity of the art of weaving vegetable fibres into cloth, says Professor MacMillan in the Strand Magazine, it is remarkable that in some portions of the tropical world there are at the present day races of men who obtain their rude costumes from the inner bark of certain trees. Before the advance of civilization such material, it is believed, provided the principal articles of "clothing" for inhabitants of tropical regions, as did the skins of animals for people in cooler climes. One of the best to cleanse the wound and apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is a powerful yet painless germ killer, and when applied to the broken skin is absorbed into the tissue, instantly destroying the germs that spread disease and inflammation.

The flesh is soothed and purified, the wound made perfectly healthy, and all poison and cause of festering removed. Having done this, Zam-Buk then proceeds to heal the wound or sore with new healthy tissue, in a quick, painless, and perfect manner.

Zam-Buk must not be confused with ordinary ointments. Zam-Buk is a unique preparation, possessing antiseptic, soothing, and healing qualities that are not to be found together in any other preparation. It is not only a unique healing salve, but it is also a skin food. For all skin diseases and injuries—cuts, bruises, burns, eczema, chafing, ulcers, ringworm, etc., it is without equal. It is also used widely for piles, for which it may be regarded as a specific. All druggists and stores sell at fifty cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, per price.

INCREASE IN SHIPBUILDING.

During the last two years shipbuilding lessened in England by one-half, in Germany by two-thirds, and in the United States by a little more than two-thirds, says an American Consular report from Bremen. From 1892 to 1897 England built 77 1/4 per cent. of the vessels, while in 1908 she built only 50 7-10 per cent. of the world's mercantile vessels. Germany's share during the same periods increased from 73-10 to 108-10. The United States, Holland and Japan show a still larger increase. In England an increase in shipbuilding is again noticeable.

A Pill That is Prized.—There have been many pills put upon the market and pressed upon public attention, but none has endured so long or met with so much favor as Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Widespread use of them has attested their great value, and they need no further advertisement than this. Having firmly established themselves in public esteem, they now rank without a peer in the list of standard vegetable preparations.

THE HEASON.

"But," protested the young housekeeper, "the milk is sour."

"Yees'in," replied the honest milk-man, "it's shameful how lazy them farmers is gettin'! Ye see, ma'am, they've been oversleepin' themselves lately, an' before they git their cows milked the stuff turns."

The microscope in the hands of experts employed by the United States Government has revealed the fact that a house fly sometimes carries thousands of disease germs attached to its hairy body. The continuous use of Wilson's Fly Pads will prevent all danger of infection from that source by killing both the germs and the flies.

A retired naval chaplain became rector of an English country parish. On one occasion his parishioners, wishing to give him a surprise, bought a flag for the church tower. When the rector saw it hoisted on the tower he at once ordered it to be taken down. On being asked his reason for doing so, he indignantly answered:—"Allow that flag to fly over my church? Never! Do you know what that particular flag signifies? 'In distress; want a pilot!'"

OTTAWA NEWS.

The Mail and Empire continues its assault upon Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, because that gentleman in the proper exercise of his functions, issued a charter to a racing association.

Wrong Point of View.

Both the Mail and the Globe persist in looking at the transaction from the wrong view point. Mr. Murphy issued the charter because, as the representative of the Crown, it was his duty to do so. Laws are made by Parliament for the people, and while Parliament delegates the duty of creating certain organizations, it does not presuppose that the rights and powers conferred will be abused. Neither Parliament nor the Secretary of State are liable for abuses of the law under charters granted by either.

Cannot Refuse Charter.

The Secretary of State cannot refuse to grant a charter for the hypothetical reason that illegal acts may be committed by the holders thereof. If the law is complied with, Parliament does not decline to incorporate a number of men for specific objects, because they may, after incorporation, do something illegal and bring themselves within the law. The law under which incorporation is secured is the same law which confines the incorporators within legal limits, if they go beyond these limits they become amenable to the legal penalty.

Up to Provincial Authorities.

There is this difference, however, the Federal Government may create a corporation, but it is the duty of the provincial authorities to see to it that the powers conferred are not abused, and to punish when a breach of the law occurs. The Secretary of State cannot assume upon granting a charter that there is any intention of breaking the law. To take such a position would paralyze the operation of the Companies' Act.

Common Sense Points.

Would it be within the bonds of common sense for the Secretary of State to refuse incorporation to a mining company upon the ground that the company after incorporation might make an over issue of stock?

Would the Secretary of State be justified in refusing incorporation to an industrial company upon the ground that after incorporation they might engage in business not authorized by the charter?

Such a contention would be ridiculous.

Cannot Contemplate Fraud.

Hon. Mr. Murphy issued a charter to a racing association. Racing is acknowledged by the law as a legitimate business or pastime, but in granting incorporation to a racing association the Secretary of State did not give his sanction to gambling, neither did he confer the power to gamble.

Don't Understand Charter Powers.

The whole objection to the actions succeeded to a degree that has earned the unstinted support of both races in Canada. The tribute to the integrity of his personal life and public record was unnecessary. The man is unborn who can charge Sir Wilfrid with a dishonest or unjust act throughout his official life. The advent of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to the premiership was the dawn of great prosperity for Canada.

Premier's Moral Stand.

The Telegram concludes its panegyric by the statement that the premier is incapable of seeing to it that partisan undesirables keep their own hands and lives clean, or else keep out of public life.

No man has ever charged that Sir Wilfrid would connive at wrong-doing, neither has any man brought forward a specific charge against any member of the Government. The premier has at all times expressed his willingness to grant the most searching investigation. Time and again the premier has intimated that he would pay no attention to generalities, but he has invariably pledged himself to appoint a select committee to examine into the truth of any straight-forward charge.

Warped Ideas of Tory Press.

The Toronto News, speaking of the development of the North, attributes the prosperity of that section to the construction of railways. Incidentally it is stated that the National Transcontinental and the Canadian Northern are building in Northern Ontario, and that while the former will carry produce to eastern points, the Temiskaming Railway and the Canadian Northern when built from Sudbury to Nipigon will divert traffic to Toronto. The News says—

"In view of these considerations alone, the older portions of the province will support the Ministry (Sir James Whitney's ministry) in any proper step that may be taken to hasten the opening up and developing of this region."

That is, the News will support any scheme of railway subsidy to be paid by the people of the whole province of Ontario, if it can be shown that the benefit will go to Toronto.

This is the warped view entertained by the Toronto News. Anything that will benefit Toronto should be supported without regard to the rights of the other portions of the province entitled to the same consideration. Provincial rights is a purely local affair to the Tory Press of Toronto.

Dominion Lands Revenue.

During the fiscal year 1895-96 the total gross cash receipts from Dominion lands amounted to $174,509.

As evidence of the development that has taken place during the present regime it may be stated that for the three months of the present fiscal year, the gross revenue from Dominion lands was $829,817.91. The revenue from this source for the month of June was more than during the whole year 1895-96.

Some Comparisons.

The total revenue for 10 years from Dominion lands up to 30 of June 1896, amounted to $2,343,835, and for the next 10 years from the same source the revenue amounted to $13,139,941, nearly six times greater.

Compare the gross revenue with Dominion lands in 1865-96 ($174,509) with what was received in the past fiscal year, $2,254,283, and it tells the story of the marvelous development of the great Northwest since the Liberals succeeded to office in 1896.

Large Surplus Each Year.

A point worthy of the consideration of those who criticise the expense of the department is, that there is a large surplus in the receipts from Dominion lands every year, over and above the expense of administration. Previous

A Veteran Musician.

Dr. W. H. Cummings, who celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday on August 22nd, and whose scholars at the Guildhall School of Music, at London, Eng., presented him with his portrait a short time ago, has been before the public as a singer or performer for seventy years. He was barely seven when he became a chorister at St. Paul's Cathedral, and in his tenth year he went to the Temple Church. In those days the Temple choristers were in great demand at glee clubs and musical parties, and young Cummings often earned $25 to $30 per week. Dr. Cummings' hobby is that of collecting musical antiquities, and his records of great composers of the past are practically unrivaled.

How to Cure a Kicking Horse.

A good and simple plan to cure a kicking horse is to hang a bag of sand or gravel from the ceiling of the stable in such a way that the bag will be a little distance behind where the refractory animal is standing. Whenever he kicks he will strike the bag and in return will receive a smart blow from it, which he will remember. It may take a few days to impress upon his mind that he will always be rewarded for his unmannerly conduct in this way, but unless he is exceedingly stupid he will quickly learn the lesson, and then the bag may be removed. It is asserted that a horse once cured in this manner will never again think of kicking, but whether this is true or not time alone can tell.

To Make Onion Juice.

I have often been deterred from using onion juice in salad, meat loaf and so forth because of the length of time it took to secure it and the danger of getting it in the eyes. But since the following discovery it has been an easy matter: Cut a thick slice off of one end of an onion, but do not peel, as the skin helps to protect the eyes and fingers. Hold the onion on the table with one hand and scrape the cut side gently with a teaspoon until the required quantity of juice is secured, emptying the spoon as it fills. A teaspoonful or two is usually all that is necessary to secure the required flavor in any dish to which it is added.—Housekeeper.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is one dread disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonies. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Mr. Murphy issued a charter to a racing association. Racing is acknowledged by the law as a legitimate business or pastime, but in granting incorporation to a racing association the Secretary of State did not give his sanction to gambling, neither did he confer the power to gamble.

Don't Understand Charter Powers.

The whole objection to the actions of the Secretary of State is based upon the presumption that gambling may be done as a consequence of the issuance of the charter. One may as well decline to issue liquor licences upon the ground that the applicants would be sure to keep open after hours.

If anything illegal is done under the charter it becomes the duty of the Provincial Government to punish the guilty parties. The mere issuance of the charter is the creation of an incorporated company which may never do an illegal act if it should then let the provincial authorities, who alone are charged with the administration of the law, step in and do their duty.

Every person with a knowledge of political economy knows that the enforcement of a bad law brings about its repeal or revision. Therefore, if there is any defect in the existing law Mr. Murphy will lend the weight of his influence to bring about a remedy, but in the meantime he must administer the law as he finds it.

Crops of Canada.

A statement of the farm crops of Canada at the end of August has been issued by the Census and Statistics Office. It gives the estimates of production computed from the reports of a large staff of correspondents and although the totals are somewhat less than those of a month ago for wheat and barley, they still show that Canada has reaped a large harvest.

The wheat crop is put down a 168,386,000 bushels or 21.73 bushels per acre.

Barley 56,975,000 bushels or 21.73 bushels per acre.

Oats, not estimated last month, at 354,919,000 bushels or 38.15 bushels per acre.

Rye, 1,708,000 bushels. Peas, 8,184,000 bushels. Beans, 1,311,000 bushels. Buckwheat, 7,794,000 bushels. Mixed grains, 19,523,000. Flax, 2,131,000 bushels. Hay, 10,246,000 tons.

Harvesting operations were about concluded at the end of August, except in Quebec and the Maritime provinces and although there was a scarcity of labor in the Northwest, the fine weather there made the cutting of grain possible in good condition.

The wheat estimate for the three Western provinces is 149,285,000 bushels, oats 187,802,000 bushels and barley, 33,893,000 bushels.

Debt of Gratitude Owed.

The people of Canada owed a debt of gratitude to the Liberal Government for providing railways to transport this produce, convenient wharfs to handle it, and safe waterways to transport it to the sea. The money expended by the Liberal Government in improving the water ways has been the direct means of attracting commerce through Canadian channels at a lower rate of insurance than was possible in earlier days.

Estimate of Sir Wilfrid.

The Toronto Telegram makes an allusion to Sir Wilfrid Laurier as a small and petty tyrant, who is bigoted, intolerant and unjust, and adds that "Canada never had a Premier more prone than Sir Wilfrid Laurier to rest content with the undoubted cleanliness of his own hands and life."

One of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's chief characteristics is his tolerance, perfect fairness and lack of bigotry. His whole life has been devoted to the task of cementing the races in harmony and mutual self-respect. In this he has of the great Northwest since the Liberals succeeded to office in 1896.

Large Surplus Each Year.

A point worthy of the consideration of those who criticise the expense of the department is, that there is a large surplus in the receipts from Dominion lands every year, over and above the expense of administration. Previous to 1896 there were great outlays, but not sufficient to produce a surplus.

Quebec Bridge.

One of the great undertakings of the Department of Railways is the re-construction of the Quebec Bridge. It should be remembered that this is the greatest project of its kind in the world.

The bridge over the Forth is nearly as long as its spans, but it is merely a single track railway bridge, while the proposed Quebec structure will combine railway, street railway, vehicle and foot traffic.

Origin of Work.

Originally the work was undertaken by the Quebec Bridge Company, a non-partisan organization of gentlemen interested in the completion of the work.

History of Construction.

The history of the partial construction and terrible catastrophe of the falling of the bridge is fresh in the minds of the people. After mature consideration the Government decided to take over the project, as they had a right to do under the statute, and an act was passed a little over a year ago placing the matter under the jurisdiction of the Railways and Canals Department. The head of that department recommended the appointment of three of the leading bridge engineers of the world, and to them was entrusted the work of making investigations and drawing plans. They were given the full responsibility of putting their plans into execution and constructing the bridge.

It will be readily understood while speed and cost are two great essentials in this work, that the greatest necessity of all is the perfect safety of the completed structure.

Plans Result of Research.

The eminent engineers appointed have been investigating and studying in almost every land on the globe, endeavouring to arrive at a conclusion which would place the success of the undertaking beyond adventure. It is foreseen that such very eminent men might disagree, and provision was made by order-in-council for calling in experts to confer in case of differences of opinion and to assist in arriving at satisfactory conclusions.

Such experts have been called upon recently and have conferred with the board of three, with the very satisfactory result that all essentials have been agreed upon.

Plans are now being prepared for cantilever and suspension bridge, and in each of these spans tenders will be called, and it will then be decided which style of bridge will be constructed, as either of the plans may be considered perfectly safe.

Delay is Justified.

There has been some criticism as to the time taken to arrive at the present stage, but it is pleasing to note that leading Conservative papers like the "Montreal Gazette" have expressed strong approval of the care that has been exercised by the Board of Engineers.

A CANINE HERO.

The Story of Scotch, an Obedient and Loyal Dog.

A most interesting as well as a most pathetic dog story is related by Enos A. Mills in his book, "Wild Life on the Rockies." Mr. Mills and his dog Scotch were on a four days' tramp on the summit of a desolate and lofty range far above the timber line, and Mr. Mills stopped to take some photographs. The work required that he should remove his sheepskin mittens, which he placed in his coat pocket. The story follows:

From time to time as I climbed the summit of the continental divide I stopped to take photographs, but on the summit the cold pierced my silk gloves, and I felt for my mittens, to find that one of them was lost.

I stopped, put an arm around Scotch, and told him I had lost a mitten and that I wanted him to go down for it to save me trouble.

Instead of starting off willingly, as he had invariably done before in obedience to my commands, he stood still. I thought he had misunderstood me, so I patted him and then, pointing down the slope, said: "Go for the mitten, Scotch. I will wait here for you."

He started for it, but went unwillingly. He had always served me so cheerfully that I could not understand, and it was not until late the next afternoon that I realized that he had obeyed and at the risk of his life tried to obey me.

My cabin, 18 miles away, was the nearest house, and the region was utterly wild. I waited a reasonable time for Scotch to return, but he did not come back. As it was late in the afternoon and growing colder, I decided to go on toward my cabin along a route that I felt sure he would follow, and I reasoned that he would overtake me.

When at midnight he had not come I felt something was wrong. I slept two hours and decided to go to meet him. The thermometer showed 14 below zero. I kept on going, and at 2 in the afternoon, 24 hours after I had sent Scotch back, I paused on a crag and looked below. There in the snowy world of white he lay by the mitten in the snow. He had misunderstood me and had gone back to guard the mitten instead of to get it.

After waiting for him to eat a luncheon we started merrily toward home, where we arrived at 4 o'clock in the morning.

Had I not returned, I suppose Scotch would have died beside the mitten. In a region cold, cheerless, oppressive, without food and perhaps to die, he lay down by the mitten because he understood that I told him to. In the annals of dog heroism I know of no greater deed.

Law of Attraction.

The attractions of men to women and women to men are full of the most perplexing inconsistencies and contradictions imaginable. It is, for instance, a physical law that magnetism is not simple attraction of one thing for another, but the difference of two opposing forces of attraction and repulsion, of which the former is the greater. The same law holds in relation to the attraction of men and women for each other, in which, as a rule, the masculine is the superior force.

Fair Huntresses.

The Countess of Minto, the wife of the Viceroy of India, also her daughter, Lady Eileen Elliot, have each been distinguishing themselves in the jungle amongst the man-eaters. Shooting at Kolabari, Lady Eileen and Lord Minto killed a tigress and two cubs one forenoon, and out of four tigers accounted for in the afternoon, Lady Minto and her daughter each brought down one.

Town Infested by Tigers.

SNEEZING

Some Superstitions Concerning This Nose Trouble.

During the middle ages Italy was devastated by an epidemic which seemed to have sneezing as its fatal symptom. Straightway a sneeze was considered evidence of approaching death.

In somewhat earlier times the luck or ill luck of a sneeze was dependent upon the side toward which it was directed. The right side was considered lucky, the left unlucky. A sneeze was heard on the right on one of the ships before the battle of Salamis and it was considered a lucky omen.

Xenophanes considered a sneeze from one of his soldiers a significant prophecy of victory.

Theocritus stated that a bridegroom who sneezed was sure to be happy and lucky, while Catullus declared it a good omen if two lovers sneezed.

In the olden days if a man sneezed while dressing he went back to bed again before completing his toilet, and the captain of a vessel would delay his voyage if one of his sailors sneezed while weighing anchor.

At the present time there seems to be a superstition to the effect that a sneeze before breakfast indicates the reception of a present before the week is out. A sneeze on Sunday, it is said, is an assurance that you will meet your true love before the end of the week. On Monday it means danger; on Tuesday that you will be introduced to a stranger; on Wednesday a letter and on Thursday something better. There is but one omen concerning sneezing that is undeniable, and that is that the sneezer either has a cold or is catching one.

Although I was born in Shanghai, China, and have traveled extensively in the east I have never yet come across a truly Christian Chinaman, writes an Anglo-Indian in commenting on this important subject. I have, however, had frequent experience with so-called Christian East Indians. When I first went out to Burma some 25 years ago my uncle rather facetiously gave me for a "boy," or body servant, a Madrasse who was deaf and couldn't speak a word of English. This was disconcerting, but it made me learn the language quicker than I otherwise would have done. This "boy," I discovered, professed to be a Christian, and in that capacity on a contrariwise principle thought it right to lie to me prodigiously. He would overhaul my effects pretty thoroughly in the daytime when I was absent, but at last he gave himself away, for on my reaching home one day I found a piece of paper in one of my albums, on which was written in Hindustanee, "May the Lord have mercy on your soul!" As I wasn't taking any earthly chances I promptly discharged him.

On another occasion, and this is more to the point, I saw my uncle thrashing his coachman, also a professed Christian. I inquired the reason. "The beggar's getting a darned sight too fond of my wife!" was the answer. "Now, he'll stop it for two or three months." In the end my relative, who was a barrister in high standing, declined to have a servant in his household who had not committed some crime in the calendar. He said they were a complete protection to him, and he was right. In fact, we always fought shy of a so-called Christianized native. We much preferred the "pukkah," that is, real article. The heathen would steal from you—that was of course expected—but he would take extremely good care that nobody else took a hand in the filching, whereas it was impossible to conjecture what a convert would be up to.

Some time ago I got into conversation with my Chinese laundryman. Did he go to Sunday school? A nod. "Nice young lad!" I had to smile. "Are you a Christian?" A Celestial smile on his side and a soft and sly "Notice yet?" No; and he never will be actually, nor if he snips his queue a hundred times. To any one acquainted with the eastern temperament it seems a shame that girls should be asked in the churches, as they are, to become teachers in the Chinese Sunday school.

A Mean Man.

The fond young wife, dressed in her most becoming gown, with her hair arranged to set off her beautiful face perfectly, meets her husband at the door when he returns from his daily toil. She is solicitous as to his welfare; she just knows he is tired to death; she insists "that he must put on his slippers and be comfortable. The dinner is composed of the things he likes most, and his wife chats merrily to him during the meal. It is the realization of his ideal of what a home and a home-coming should be. After dinner she leads the way to the cozy library, where his favorite chair is drawn up where he will get the best light; his favorite magazine is ready for him and some of his favorite cigars wait on the library table. Wifey perches herself on the arm of his chair, lights his cigar for him and is just about to say something when he looks up at her knowingly, takes a magazine from his pocket, opens it to an article explaining how best to broach the subject of a new hat to a husband and says, "I certainly enjoyed that dinner, but I read the program on the way home in the car."

Changed His Mind.

The guest gave his order at dinner time to his hotel waiter: "George, member of the National Rifle Club. This is also an exclusive Tyrolean privilege.

When a youth reaches the age of 18 he must attend the nearest rifle range, whether he is a member or not, and fire a certain number of shots. And later, if he is passed for military service, he must again fire a certain number of rounds as conscript as he joins his regiment. The regimental authorities thus know the shooting possibilities of each recruit, and these preliminary tests are carried out with the service rifle, of which every range must possess a few.

Weather permitting, every range is open for practice on Sunday throughout the year from 11 a.m. till sunset. Ammunition is supplied at cost price, but most marksmen prefer to supply their own cartridges, which they fill themselves. The clerk of the range enters every score on an official sheet, and a nominal charge of four hellers (less than a halfpenny) is made for each shot entered therein. This pays for the upkeep of the range, the markers, etc.

An additional zest is given by a weekly Gnadengabe (gift of grace) from the Government, whereby the top scorers of the day receive two or three shillings each as a prize. The older men and crack shots, however, seldom compete for these small prizes and give their younger and poorer comrades a chance to pay their day's shooting expenses—Reginald Wyon, in Chambers' Journal.

Americanism.

"Don't," said Lady Lacland to the American heiresses she was about to launch in London—"don't say clerk when you mean shop assistant." A clerk is a writer, not a salesman. Pronounce it 'clark,' by the way.

"Don't say 'mad' when you mean 'angry.' Madness is insanity.

"Don't say 'on' a street, but 'in' a street.

"Don't say it is claimed that So-and-so." Say 'it is declared' or 'it is stated.' Why? Oh, because 'it is claimed' is an Americanism. In good Oxford English the expression is neither written nor spoken.

"Don't say 'patent.' Say 'patent."

Armless, But Useful.

Professor Karl Lohmeyer of Königsberg, who died at Danzig, at the age of 72, was born without arms. A special permit was granted to allow his entry into the university service. His students opened and shut doors for him, but he turned the pages of books with his mouth and could sign his name firmly with a pen held between his teeth.

Fine Crops.

"Do you raise anything worth while in your garden?" said the visitor from the city.

"I should say so," answered Mr. Crossots. "It's the best place for fishing worms in the entire village."

Plain Talk.

"I think she's double faced."

"Oh, don't say that! One face like hers is bad enough!"—Comic Cur.

is said, is an assurance that you will meet your true love before the end of the week. On Monday it means danger; on Tuesday that you will be introduced to a stranger; on Wednesday a letter and on Thursday something better. There is but one omen concerning sneezing that is undeniable, and that is that the sneezer either has a cold or is catching one.

Darwin's Fox.

Among the relics of Charles Darwin on view in the Centenary Exhibition at the Natural History Museum, South Kensington, London, is the skin of a fox, mentioned in the "Naturalist's Voyage Round the World." It is from the island of San Pedro, South Chile, and its capture was thus described by Darwin: "Two of the officers landed to take a round of angles with the theodolite. A fox was sitting on the rocks. He was so intently absorbed in watching the work of the officers that I was able, by quietly walking up behind, to knock him on the head with my geological hammer." Next door is the savant's geological hammer, probably, as the catalogue says, the identical one with which he killed the fox.

How to Clean Wall Paper.

To clean wall paper use the following recipe: Ten cents' worth of liquid ammonia, 10 cents' worth of oil of sassafras, one teaspoonful (even full) of soda, two teaspoonfuls (even full) of salt and one quart of cold water. Mix the cold water with the ingredients, then add white flour until it is thick enough to drop from a spoon. Put in a covered pail, set in a kettle of boiling water and cook until done, stirring often. If it does not stick to the hands when cool it is done. Remove from the pail and divide into "loaves," working each piece awhile in the hand. Take out only what is needed, leaving the rest covered in the pail to prevent the ammonia from evaporating. Rub the wall with a loaf, working the dirt into the dough. When very dirty, exchange for a clean loaf. This removes dirt and grease magically and leaves old paper as good as new when used carefully.

As In a Looking-Glass.

"I know I am looking like a fright to-night," said the woman. The men studied her dress, her hair and her complexion closely. "I don't see anything the matter with you," he said. "So far as I can see, you are looking as well as usual." "But I am not," she insisted. "There is something wrong, and that head waiter saw at a glance what it is. If I had been up to the mark he wouldn't have put us away over here in this out of the way corner. He would have given us a table right under the chandelier in the middle of the room. All the best dressed people are always seated in the most conspicuous places, so as to make the restaurant look attractive. I am glad to say that that is where I usually sit. The plain people are ranged along the sides of the room just as we are to-night."

Old English Libel Suit.

Parliamentary reporter was ably upheld by Lord Brougham, especially during the great reform debates of the last century. On one occasion, when anti-reformers were trying to hew him down by imitating the sounds made by various animals, among which the braying of the ass was most recurrent, he waited for a pause and then remarked imperturbably that by a wonderful disposition of nature every animal had its peculiar mode of expressing itself and he was too much of a philosopher to quarrel with any of those modes. This was no less severe than the famous libel on the Earl of Limerick, calling him "a thing with human pretensions," which appeared in The Times in 1831 and for which the printer was fined $500 and confined for an indefinite period in Newgate.—London Chronicle.

ing how best to broach the subject of a new hat to a husband and says, "I certainly enjoyed that dinner, but I read the program on the way home in the car."

Changed His Mind.

The guest gave his order at dinner time to his hotel waiter: "George, bring me some oysters on the half shell, some chicken soup, olives and radishes, and follow that with some planked shad. Then I will have some rare roast beef, Philadelphia capon, squash on toast, baked sweets, cauliflower and celery, and for dessert just a trifle of ice cream and cake, pie, cheese and a demitasse."

Just then his friend reminded him that that hotel was run on the European and not the American plan, whereupon he recalled the waiter and said: "George, I have changed my mind about that dinner. Bring me some corned beef hash and a glass of milk."

The Flea.

Oh, there's nothing quite so maddening as a pesky, crawling flea when the little cuss is biting in a spot you cannot see! There's nothing drives man and woman to the point where they will swear like this hopping, frisky critter when he's out upon a tear! We can stand the skeeter's humming round about our bed at night, but we break the Ten Commandments when the fleas begin to bite, and we can't conceive why Noah ever had the nerve to bark when Dame Nature first suggested saving two fleas in the ark!

Raid of the Tuareks.

It is their curious social life which forces the Tuareks, living in the Sahara back of Tripoli, to raid caravans. The mother has all the rights over the children, and all the property is in the hands of the women. To marry a wife a Tuarek must pay a large sum to the bride and her mother, and the only way to get the necessary wealth is a successful raid, for the male Tuarek's ordinary occupation—camel farming and carrying loads for traders—gets him hardly enough profit to live by.

TYROLEAN MARKSMEN.

Peasant Sharpshooters and the Way They Are Trained.

Some idea of the accuracy of a Tyrolean crack shot may be gathered from the fact that unless he can, standing, put five successive bullets into a space that can be covered by a half crown piece at 200 yards he considers himself in very poor form. Even then his score may be only 20 out of a possible 30. A poor shot, though a man who can get on the 12-inch bull every time, may find himself credited with a paltry five or six. It is disheartening work for a novice, even if he has not done so badly at Bisley in former days and proudly sported the marksman's crossed rifles on his volunteer uniform.

That this fancy shooting—there is no better name for it—does not spoil the Tyrolean peasant for military rifle shooting is amply demonstrated when we witness an Imperial rifle regiment on parade. It would seem as if every man wore the green velvet balls dangling on his breast, the Austrian Army badge of marksmanship. But, excellent weapon as is the Austrian Mannlicher rifle, it is of little use at the tiny targets of the national shooting ranges.

The writer has had ample opportunity of studying the Tyrolean peasant marksman at home. Every village or cluster of villages has its own rifle range, run by the village council, and controlled by the state. Membership is not obligatory, but there is an subscription attached to it, and, once a member, the peasant may use any rifle range throughout the country. A further privilege is granted him after the completion of his three years' military service—namely, that one of the annual three weeks' trainings with the colors as reservist is remitted to the Standarten, or

A Laughter Maker on Laughs.

"Don't trust a man until you've laughed with him. You can tell him by his laugh. I know all the laughs there are—the hearty laugh, the nanny goat laugh, the twiddle-dee laugh (a kind of titter), the guffaw, the mere smile, the merry laugh with the eye and middle class laugh. They're all good, but save me from the man who laughs with his ears—you know, the man who sits down at an entertainment with a sort of 'I dare you to make me laugh' kinder air and bites his lips when he sees a joke."—Marshall P. Kidney Disease For Years

This Well Known Gentleman Strongly Recommends "Fruit-a-tives" to all Sufferers.

JAMES DINGWALL, Esq.

"I have much pleasure in testifying to the almost marvellous benefit I have derived from taking "Fruit-a-tives." I was a lifelong sufferer from Chronic Constipation, and the only medicine I ever secured to do me any real good was "Fruit-a-tives." This medicine cured me when everything else failed. Also, last spring I had a severe ATTACK OF BLADDER TROUBLE WITH KIDNEY TROUBLE, and "Fruit-a-tives" cured these complaints for me, when the physician attending me had practically given me up.

I am now over eighty years of age and I can strongly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" for chronic constipation and bladder and kidney trouble. This medicine is very mild like fruit, is easy to take, but most effective in action."

The Kind Cat.

A neighbor of old Mrs. Harrington killed a fine pig one day. He cut it up and hung the pieces in his woodshed. Mrs. Harrington's cat climbed into the shed that night, stole a large pork chop and carried it home to her mistress. The minister happened to call on the old lady the next day. She was just frying the chop. She told the minister how miraculously it had been brought to her by the cat.

"And, oh, sir," she said plausibly, "it was almost beautiful to see the way the sweet animal brought me the pork chop. It quite recalled to my mind what we read in Holy Writ about Elijah and the ravens."—Exchange.

The Courtship Gate.

We have been shown a design for an upholstered front gate which seems destined to become very popular. The footboard is cushioned, and there is a warm soapstone on each side, the inside step being adjustable, so that a short girl can bring her lips to the line of any given mustache without trouble. If the gate is occupied at 10:30 p.m., an iron hand extends from one gate post, takes the young man by the left ear, turns him around, and he is at once started toward home by a steel foot. The girl can, if she likes, set this part at later hour than 10:30.—Jones County (Ga.) News.

For ships to pass around Gibraltar, England's and the world's greatest fortress, without being observed even at night is a practical impossibility, owing to the great battery of searchlights arranged along the bottom of the rock. A moving beam of light then follows her until the lookout officers are satisfied as to her intentions.—Popular Mechanics.

ALEXANDER'S SNAKE.

A Story of Magic and Credulity in the Olden Days.

No snake that ever lived won greater fame for the time than Alexander's. Lucian tells the story. Apollonius, a master of the magic arts, had many disciples, among whom was a practicing physician who lived in Abonotichus, a small town on the shore of the Black sea. There Alexander was born of humble parentage and imbibed from the old doctor all that he had learned from Apollonius of medicine and magic. He was a lad of striking appearance, tall, handsome, with a fine head of hair, lustrous brown eyes and a voice sweet and limpid. "God grant," wrote Lucian, who knew him, "that I may never meet with such another. His coming was wonderful, his dexterity matchless. His eagerness for knowledge, his capacity for learning and power of memory were equally extraordinary."

Such was the well favored young peasant who sallied forth from his native town in search of fame and fortune. Soon he fell in with one Coconas, a shrewd tipster for the races and somewhat of a juggler. The two rogues joined forces and meandered about telling fortunes. Arriving at Pella, they found a great number of huge, harmless snakes which lived in the houses, played and slept with the children and destroyed poisonous rats. Alexander promptly purchased one of the largest, a veritable monster, so tame that it would coil about his body and remain in any desired position.

Then he made a human face for it out of linen, painted it ingeniously and shaped it so that the mouth would open and shut by an arrangement of horsehair, letting the forked tongue shoot in and out at the will of the master. Having no further use for Coconas, he either administered poison to him or let him die from some infection and returned with his snake to his native town. There he declared himself a prophet and announced that the god Aesculapius was about to appear. The people were credulous, excited and eager for a new divinity.

When the great day arrived Alexander pretended to discover in a puddle of water a goose egg which he had placed there after removing the contents, substituting a small embryo snake just born and carefully sealing the shell with wax. When the multitude had gathered he broke the shell and produced the tiny creature, which in a few moments grew to be the monster from Pella by the simple process of substitution. Thereafter the big snake, believed to be Aesculapius, led a busy life. He gave seances, told fortunes, writing and even spoke freely, with the aid of the prophet's ventriloquial powers. Alexander grew rich and powerful, kept a small army of retainers and spies, wielded no little influence over the government even at Rome and died at a ripe old age in the fullness of his renown. What became of the snake nobody knows. Probably at the last the prophet dispatched the faithful creature to prevent the discovery of his deception after his death.—George Harvey in North American Review.

The above is a true copy of a proposed By-Law to be taken into consideration by the County Council of the County of Lennox and Addington at its Special Session to be held at the Court House, in the Town of Napanee, in the said County on Tuesday, the 2nd day of November, A. D., 1909, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon, at which time and place the members of the Council are hereby required to attend for the purpose aforesaid.

W. G. WILSON,

County Clerk,

Dated July 23rd, 1909.

One was a slender and very pretty child, quite the belle of the class and the cause of many a heart flutter. It was in the course of a morning recitation a few days previous to the close of school that the teacher asked her if she could define an irrelevant remark.

"I can't just define it," she answered, "but I can give an example."

"Very well, give the example, please."

"Well, if I should be going through a dark hall and should meet Will White, and he should ask me the time, and I should say, 'My, but your nose is cold,' that would be an irrelevant remark."

Puzzled.

The other day a little red faced Irishman approached a postoffice which had three letter boxes outside. One was labeled "City," another "Domestic" and the third "Foreign."

He looked at the three in turn, then, as a puzzled expression crossed his face, scratched his head.

"Faith," he was heard to mutter, "I don't know in which wan to put th' letter. Sure, Katie's a domestic, an' she lives in the city all right, an' she's a furiner too; but, begobs, how can th' thing go in both of the three holes at wance?"

Ages and Stage Life.

She entered upon her stage life at the age of fifteen and had attained phenomenal success at twenty. Ten years later she toured the States as a star. She was then twenty-three. Eight years after she left the glare of the footlights, married, got a divorce and returned to her old love at twenty-four. Notwithstanding the fact that her long career upon the boards (twenty-five years) has left its marks on her face she seems as ambitious and nimble at the head of her own company as she ever did. She is now twenty-eight.—Bohemian Magazine.

The camera, which divides time into thousandths of a second and records the impressions of each, makes permanent pictures of events which pass too quickly for the dull human retina to recognize. It is only through the camera that the motions of flying birds and of swift running animals have been analyzed. To the camera the fuzzy drivers of the swiftly speeding locomotives stand out clear cut and stationary, while each flying drop of rain in the driven storm is distinct and seems frozen in its place. The tarpon fisherman, familiar with the first wild leap of the frenzied fish as it casts hook and bait fifty feet in the air, sees first in the finished picture the outstretched gills, the convulsive opening and closing of which had escaped his eye, however closely he may have looked for it.

Often the eye of the camera will decipher documents of which the writing had been substantially obliterated by age, and I have successfully copied with the camera the utterly faded photograph of a classmate of forty years previous and thereby been enabled to present to a grizzled veteran a like likeness of his curly haired youth. Changes in the pigment of the skin undiscernable by the eye appear with distinctness on the sensitive plate, and it is said that ample warning of approaching disease has been thereby given.

By means of the invisible rays lying beyond the violet of the spectrum objects may be photographed in the darkness and, with the aid of the so called X rays, through substances otherwise opaque. When from the darkness of night and storm the forked lightning flashes, the camera makes a vivid and permanent picture of each fiery trail. Creatures that travel by night can be "caught" in the brief blaze of a magnesium charged pistol, the flash of which is of too short duration for the creature to move or the dull human eye to recognize the subject.—A. W. Dimock in Van Norden's.

JAPAN A LAND OF COLOR.

Farms of Two or Three Acres Divided into Many Tiny Fields.

Land is so scarce in Japan and the people so numerous that a farm rarely consists of more than an acre or two. These little farms are divided up into tiny fields. During the season of the year in which we made our journey one of these fields was filled with sprouting barley, light green in color; another field, perhaps the next, with vetch, a lavender colored, cloverlike fodder; a neighboring field with a dark green grass from the seed of which a lamp oil is manufactured; another with the pale yellow flowers of the mustard, and scattered here and there fields filled with what looked like a variety of illy, some white, some red, some yellow, but all equally brilliant.

Then to get the complete picture you must imagine patches of flowering azaleas dotting the roadside; towering, round topped camellia trees breaking the sky line with frequent splashes of bright green; usually in the shade of these trees houses with white plastered walls and red tiled roofs; about the more pretentious of these houses white plastered walls, above which appeared a profusion of palms, roses and strange native flowers, and in the doorways of the garden walls kimono clad Japanese girls, the kimonos as many and as gayly colored as the garden that framed them.

I have traveled in but one other country that is so gayly colored, and that was some few years ago, when, in the company of a number of other youngsters and an evil smelling magic lantern, I used to make frequent visits to the Land of Primary Colors.—George MacAdam in Outing Magazine.

Was held at Tamworth on Thursday of last week. The attendance was large and the exhibits good and but for the rain in the afternoon the fair would have been all that could be desired. The exhibits were good but in quantity did not quite come up to some other years. The five mile race was a big attraction. There was a large crowd out to see the race, and it proved a most interesting event. The following started: Cole, Stinson, Edgar, Jackson, of Kingston, Cotton, of Sulphite, Darlington, of Marlbank. Stinson led at the first mile, with Cole and Edgar second and third, time for first mile, 5.35. Cole took the lead after the first mile, and was never in trouble. Edgar here took second place Stinson taking third. These men held these positions throughout the remainder of the race. Darlington ran a good race, and finished a good fourth, Jackson fifth and cotton sixth. Cole's time was 30.15 which is good going, as the last three miles were run in the pouring rain. H. Edgar's time was 30.22, and Stinson's 32. The baseball game, between Tamworth and Sulphite was called off, after a few innings had been played, on account of rain. Physical Instructor Thompson, of the Y.M.C.A. of Kingston, had charge of the race, and had everything well in hand. His services were greatly appreciated.

Owing to the rain the judging of the horses shown in halter had to be called off

CANTON'S FLOATING SLUMS.

Poor of That Great Chinese City Live on Boats.

Stand beside the imperial custom house in Canton, China, and let the eye range down the river toward Hong Kong. As far as the sight can reach lie boats, boats and again boats, writes a correspondent. These are no ordinary craft, mere vessels of transport plying hither and thither, but the countless homes of myriad Chinese, in which millions have been born, have lived and died. They are the dwellings of the very poor, who live in them practically free from rent, taxes and the other burdens of the ordinary citizen.

The tankia (which means boat dwellers), as the denizens of these floating houses are called, form a sort of caste apart from the rest of the Cantonese. The shore dwellers regard them as belonging to a lower social order, and indeed they have many customs peculiar to themselves which mark them as a separate community.

How the swarming masses of them contrive to support existence is a mystery, but their chief mode of employment is in carrying merchandise and passengers from place to place. In some cases the daughters of the family go ashore to work in factories, as do the girls of other countries; but the year's earnings of a Chinese factory girl would scarce suffice to buy a single hat for her western sister.

Of course as against this low rate of pay the standard of living is correspondingly different.

The houses which make up these vast floating slums are of all sizes. Some are but 15 feet long. From these cramped dimensions, however, they range up to a length of 50 or 60 feet.

A boat large enough to accommodate a family of moderate size can be obtained for $20, and since the anchorage is free it is obvious that the tankia effect many savings impossible to the shore dweller.

Why They Like Iodoform.

"Train robbers, burglars, safe blowers, holdup men and, in fact, nearly all that class of professional criminals who resort to deeds of violence are greatly addicted to the use of iodoform," said a former California sheriff. "These fellows after committing some crime besprinkle their clothing liberally with the loud smelling fluid. They also pour it on their guns and knives and the tools of their trade. The reason is that they often make hurried flights in which they are not infrequently trailed with bloodhounds. There is nothing a bloodhound hates worse than the scent of iodoform, and it has been repeatedly the cause of the dog abandoning pursuit of a fugitive malefactor. Knowing this, the crooks are liberal buyers of an article that may tend to cause their freedom from capture."

The Wise and Foolish Virgins.

As it happened, however, the five foolish virgins were observed in their perplexity by five wise men.

"Permit me!" quoth each of these and stepped up and filled a virgin's lamp for her, adding, "Now, you just about need somebody to look out for you, don't you, eh?"

And upon the five foolish virgins, blushing violently and looking shyly down, the five wise men lost no time in procuring licenses, and they all lived happily ever after.

As for the wise virgins, they sniffed some when they heard the news, amadaverted with considerable acerbity on the ancient mystery of the way of a man with a maid and let it go at that.

CATARRH OF HEAD

Which Pe-ru-na Relived in a Short Time.

MISS SUSIE M. KINGSWORTH.

MISS SUSIE M. KINGSWORTH, 460 Quebec St., London, Ontario, writes:

"I began using Peruna last January, when I had such a bad cold, and I could not get anything to help me.

"My nose and head were all stopped up, so that I could hardly get my breath. I thought at times that I would smother, especially at night.

"I have no trouble with that now. The noise in my head has all disappeared.

"I know Peruna will do just what you say it does. I cannot praise Peruna too highly, as it has done so much for me. I hope my letter will reach other sufferers."

Mrs. S. J. Kountz, 1015 Scovell street, Nashville, Tenn., writes:

"I have had a very bad cough nearly all my life, and I am forty-five years old. I have taken almost every kind of cough medicine that has ever been made, but none did me much good. I would have spells of coughing that I thought I would cough myself to death. I took Peruna, and last winter and this winter I have had no cough and I know that Peruna cured me."

Mr. Niedell, (who adored one's little brother) There! You did that er- rand very nicely. Here's a penny for you.

Little Brother: Oh, ma! Mr. Niedell gave me a penny!

Ma: Well, my dear, you should say—

Little Brother: Yes; I know I should say "Thank you!" but I was surprised I forgot. You said he hadn't a cent to call his own.—Stray Stories.

Not Inherited.

Nothing would induce good old Dr. Dore to believe that gout was hereditary. A very young man once consulted him in his first attack.

"You call this gout, Willie?" said the doctor. "Pooh, pooh! You have not yet earned that costly privilege."

"But my father, sir, and my grandfather!" said Willie. "It is in my blood by right of inheritance."

"Nonsense!" frowned the doctor. "You may as well tell me you have a broken leg in your veins by inheritance."

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vienna, W. Va.—"I feel that I owe the last ten years of my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven years ago I was a walking shadow. I had been under the doctor's care but got no relief. My husband persuaded me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like a charm. It relieved all my pains and misery. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MRS. EMMA WHEATON, Vienna, W. Va.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

VARICOCELE CURED

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope, but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Dr. H. C. Locust, Kennedy, as he had taken many patients from all over the country. They were quite satisfied. I wrote them and got the NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month of treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."
